Tentative Ruling

Re: Ortiz v. Sun Valley Raisins, Inc.
Case No. 25CECG04222

Hearing Date: June 30, 2026 (Dept. 502)

Motion: Defendant's Motion to Strike Portions of First Amended Complaint

If oral argument is timely requested, it will be entertained on Tuesday, July 14, 2026, at 3:30 p.m. in Department 502.

Tentative Ruling:

To deny defendant's motion to strike the tenth cause of action from the first amended complaint, as well as defendant's motion to strike the references to various Labor Code sections from the FAC. (Code Civ. Proc., § 436.) To order defendant to file and serve its answer within ten days of the date of service of this order.

Explanation:

Defendant moves to strike the entire tenth cause of action under PAGA as improperly filed, contending that plaintiff failed to give the LWDA or the employer notice of his PAGA claims and failed to wait at least 65 days after service of the notice before filing his complaint, as required by Labor Code section 2699.3. Defendant also complains that plaintiff failed to attach a copy of the notice to his first amended complaint. Defendant also argues that the first amended complaint alleges various Labor Code violations that can only be asserted by the Labor Commissioner, not by a private plaintiff, so the allegations regarding those violations should be stricken from the first amended complaint as well.

Under Labor Code section 2699.3, subdivision (a), "A civil action by an aggrieved employee pursuant to subdivision (a) or (f) of Section 2699 alleging a violation of any provision listed in Section 2699.5 shall commence only after the following requirements have been met: (1)(A) The aggrieved employee or representative shall give written notice by online filing with the Labor and Workforce Development Agency and by certified mail to the employer of the specific provisions of this code alleged to have been violated, including the facts and theories to support the alleged violation." (Para. break omitted.) "The agency shall notify the employer and the aggrieved employee or representative by certified mail that it does not intend to investigate the alleged violation within 60 calendar days of the postmark date of the notice received pursuant to paragraph (1). Upon receipt of that notice or if no notice is provided within 65 calendar days of the postmark date of the notice given pursuant to paragraph (1), the aggrieved employee may commence a civil action pursuant to Section 2699." (Lab. Code, § 2699.3, subd. (a)(2)(A).) "Notwithstanding any other provision of law, a plaintiff may as a matter of right amend an existing complaint to add a cause of action arising under this part at any time within 60 days of the time periods specified in this part." (Lab. Code, § 2699.3, subd. (a)(2)(C).) In addition, a plaintiff has a right to amend his or her complaint once without leave of court at any time before an answer, demurrer, or motion to strike is filed. (Code Civ. Proc., § 472, subd. (a).)

Here, plaintiff filed his first amended complaint on December 1, 2025 without seeking or obtaining leave of court. However, plaintiff was not required to obtain leave of court before filing his first amended complaint, as no answer, demurrer, or motion to strike had been filed at the time of the amendment. (Code Civ. Proc., § 472, subd. (a).) Therefore, defendant has not shown that the first amended complaint was improperly filed because plaintiff did not first obtain leave of court for the amendment.

To the extent that defendant argues that the amended complaint was improperly filed because it was not accompanied by a declaration showing that the amendment was necessary and proper, defendant's argument is incorrect. Defendant cites to Rule of Court 3.1324(b), which does require the filing of a declaration to support a request to amend a complaint. However, Rule of Court 3.1324 only applies where plaintiff brings a motion for leave to amend the complaint. (Cal. Rules of Court, rule 3.1324(a).) Here, plaintiff did not have to obtain leave of court to amend his complaint, so he did not need to file a declaration showing why the amendment is necessary and proper.

Next, to the extent that defendant argues that the PAGA claim is improper because plaintiff did not give notice to the employer and the LWDA and failed to wait at least 65 days after giving notice before filing the complaint, again defendant's argument is incorrect. The documents in the court's record show that plaintiff filed his original complaint on September 10, 2025, and that the original complaint did not include a PAGA claim. (The court will take judicial notice of the original complaint and the causes of action alleged therein.) Plaintiff gave notice to the LWDA on September 10, 2025 via its website, and sent notice to the defendant by certified mail on September 19, 2025. (Brown decl., ¶¶ 2, 3, and Exhibits A and B thereto.) Plaintiff waited more than 65 days after giving notice to the LWDA and defendant, and then filed his first amended complaint on December 1, 2025. The FAC included a PAGA claim for the first time. (The court will take judicial notice of the first amended complaint and the claims alleged therein.) The tenth cause of action alleges a PAGA claim, as well as alleging that plaintiff gave notice to the LWDA and the employer at least 65 days before filing the amended complaint. (FAC, ¶¶ 66-67.)

Thus, plaintiff has adequately alleged compliance with the notice requirements of section 2699.3, as well as alleging that he waited at least 65 days before filing his PAGA claim. Consequently, defendant's motion to strike is without merit and the court intends to deny it.

While defendant contends that the PAGA claim is improper because plaintiff gave notice of his PAGA claim at the same time that he filed the original complaint, defendant's argument misses the point. The original complaint did not include a PAGA claim, so the fact that plaintiff served notice on the LWDA and defendant at the same time that the original complaint was filed does not render the PAGA claim in the subsequently filed FAC defective. In fact, section 2699.3 expressly contemplates that a plaintiff will file an original complaint without a PAGA claim, and then give notice to the LWDA and the employer before filing an amended complaint adding a PAGA claim "as a matter of right." (Labor Code § 2699.3, subd. (a)(2)(C).) Thus, once plaintiff complied with the notice requirement and waited 65 days, he was allowed to file his first amended complaint as a matter of right. Consequently, defendant's argument is without merit.

Defendant also argues that the FAC is defective because it does not include a copy of the PAGA notice or summarize what the notice said. However, there is nothing in section 2699.3 that requires the plaintiff to attach a copy of the PAGA notice to the amended complaint, or to allege the contents of the notice in the amended complaint. Section 2699.3 only requires plaintiff to give notice to the LWDA and the employer at least 65 days before filing his amended complaint with the PAGA claim. It does not require plaintiff to also include the notice or its contents in the amended complaint.¹ Therefore, defendant has not shown that the tenth cause of action is defectively pled simply because plaintiff did not attach a copy of the notice to the FAC.

In its reply brief, defendant argues that it never received a copy of the notice and therefore the PAGA claim is defective for failure to give notice before filing the claim. However, defendant did not make this argument in its original motion, so it cannot raise it for the first time on reply. In addition, the argument improperly relies on extrinsic evidence, including declarations stating that defendant did not receive the notice. A defendant cannot rely on extrinsic evidence when moving to strike portions of a complaint, and must instead rely on only the allegations on the face of the pleading as well as judicially noticeable matters. (Code Civ. Proc., § 437.) Therefore, defendant's reliance on extrinsic evidence is improper. In any event, plaintiff's counsel has submitted copies of the return receipt showing that defendant was served with the notice on September 22, 2025 (Exhibit B to Brown decl.), so even if the court was inclined to consider extrinsic evidence, defendant has not shown that it did not receive notice of the PAGA claim.

Next, to the extent that defendant argues that plaintiff is improperly asserting Labor Code violations that may only be brought by the Labor Commissioner and that there is no private right of action under the various statutes cited in the FAC, defendant's motion is procedurally and substantively without merit.

First, defendant's notice of motion is defective, since it does not list the specific portions of the first amended complaint that defendant seeks to strike. Under the Rules of Court, rule 3.1322(a), "A notice of motion to strike a portion of a pleading must quote in full the portions sought to be stricken except where the motion is to strike an entire paragraph, cause of action, count, or defense." Here, the notice of motion does not quote the specific parts of the first amended complaint that defendant seeks to strike, nor does the notice of motion list the portions of the FAC that it seeks to challenge. Therefore, the notice of motion is defective, as it does not properly give notice of what defendant seeks to strike, and the court may deny it on that ground alone.

Second, even if the court were to consider the merits of the motion, defendant has failed to show that the references to the Labor Code violations are improper and

Here, plaintiff has brought his PAGA claim in order to assert the rights of himself and other aggrieved employees of defendant. He is expressly allowed to bring claims under PAGA that would otherwise have to be brought by the Labor Commissioner. Therefore, defendant's argument that plaintiff has improperly brought claims that only the Labor Commissioner may bring and that do not create a private right of action is incorrect. In fact, the entire purpose of PAGA is to deputize private aggrieved employees to bring actions for civil penalties on behalf of the Labor Commissioner. Since plaintiff has properly alleged a PAGA claim, the fact that he has alleged violations of the Labor Code that would normally only be asserted by the Labor Commissioner does not mean that he has no standing to bring the claims. Consequently, the court intends to deny the motion to strike and order defendant to file its answer to the FAC.

Re: Perez v. Perez et al.
Superior Court Case No. 23CECG00025

Hearing Date: June 30, 2026 (Dept. 502)

Motion: (1) By Defendants to Set Aside Default of Roberto Perez, and to Set Aside Request for Entry of Default of Nina Perez

(2) By Plaintiff to Compel Further Responses by Roberto Perez to Special Interrogatories

If oral argument is timely requested, it will be entertained on Tuesday, July 14, 2026, at 3:30 p.m. in Department 502.

Tentative Ruling:

(1) To grant in part and direct the clerk to set aside the default of Roberto Perez ("Roberto") that was entered on March 16, 2026. Roberto shall file his answer to the Third Amended Complaint within five days of service of the order by the clerk. The answer shall omit any reference to it being filed by Nina Perez, who is in default. To deny the motion as to Nina Perez, without prejudice to the filing of a motion that addresses her default.

(2) To grant in part. Within 20 days of service of the order by the clerk, Roberto shall serve further verified responses without objection to special interrogatory nos. 1, 2, 5, 13-15, deny as to nos. 1, 11 and 21. To deny the motion as to special interrogatory nos. 1, 11 and 21.

Explanation:

Motion to Set Aside Default

"The court may, upon any terms as may be just, relieve a party or his or her legal representative from a judgment, dismissal, order, or other proceeding taken against him or her through his or her mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect." (Code Civ. Proc., § 473, subd. (b).) This discretionary relief can be based on a declaration or other evidence showing "mistake, inadvertence, surprise or excusable neglect."

A motion for relief from a default "shall be accompanied by a copy of the answer or other pleading proposed to be filed therein, otherwise the application shall not be granted." (Code Civ. Proc., § 473, subd. (b).) The proposed answer is attached to defense counsel's declaration. (Porter Decl., Exh. D.)

On December 4, 2025, plaintiff obtained leave to file a Third Amended Complaint ("TAC"), which plaintiff filed on December 10, 2025, and served that same day by email on defense counsel Tres Porter. Though defendants have actively defended this lawsuit all along, without communication to defense counsel, plaintiff request and obtained entry of Roberto Perez's default on March 16, 2026.

Despite the fact that the TAC was signed and accompanied by a proof of service, Mr. Porter assumed that the TAC was simply provided to him as a courtesy copy, even though just days before the court had granted plaintiff leave to file the TAC. Mr. Porter believed it was a courtesy copy because the TAC was not file stamped. Additionally, he did not believe a fresh answer was required from Roberto Perez because the TAC added no new claim against him, instead only adding a new cause of action against Nina Perez.

While Mr. Porter recognizes that an answer to the TAC should have been filed, the court finds that the failure to do so was the result of mistake, inadvertence, surprise or excusable neglect, especially in light of the fact that the TAC asserted no new claim against Roberto Perez, who had answered the Second Amended Complaint on July 14, 2025.

The court also notes that it is an unfair and almost dirty tactic to quietly enter the default of a defendant, represented by counsel, without first giving advance warning. Though plaintiff represents himself, the California Attorney Guidelines of Civility and Professionalism², section 15: "An attorney should not take the default of an opposing party known to be represented by counsel without giving the party advance warning. For example an attorney should not race opposing counsel to the courthouse to knowingly enter a default before a responsive pleading can be filed. This guideline is intended to apply only to taking a default when there is a failure to timely respond to complaints, cross-complaints, and amended pleadings."

The motion filed on June 1, 2026 also seeks to set aside a Request for Entry of Default of Nina Perez that was submitted on May 13, 2026. That request was denied on May 13. The motion is therefore moot as to the Request. Moreover, a Request for Entry of Default is not an order of the court that is susceptible to being set aside. It is just a request. While Nina Perez's default was subsequently entered pursuant to a Request submitted on June 4, 2026, the motion is not directed at that entry. Additionally, the motion will not be granted as to Nina Perez because the motion offers no explanation for the failure to file an answer on her behalf. The court will be quite interested in hearing Mr. Porter's explanation for why he allowed Nina Perez's default to be entered by not filing an answer, when he necessarily knew prior to filing his motion on June 1 that an answer was needed. Instead he for some unexplained reason took no action and allowed her default to be entered. To prevent entry of her default as well, Mr. Porter simply needed to file an answer to the TAC, even if a Request for Entry of Default was pending but not yet acted upon by the court.

Motion to Compel

Plaintiff moves to compel further responses to special interrogatories from defendant Roberto. The interrogatories most seek limited information about Roberto's Jehovah's Witness church attendance and communications, and information about defendant Nina's disability/Alzheimer's disease. Roberto objected on grounds of relevancy and raised the clergy / penitent privilege.

With regards to the scope of discovery, the information sought must be relevant to the "subject matter" of the pending action or to the determination of a motion in that action. (Code Civ. Proc., § 2017.010.) Information should be regarded as "relevant" to the subject matter if it might reasonably assist a party in evaluating the case, preparing for trial, or facilitating settlement. (Gonzalez v. Superior Court (1995) 33 Cal.App.4th 1539, 1546.) Discovery extends to any information that reasonably might lead to other evidence that would be admissible at trial. Thus, the scope of permissible discovery is one of reason, logic and common sense. (Lipton v. Superior Court (1996) 48 Cal.App.4th 1599, 1611.) The "relevance to the subject matter" and "reasonably calculated to lead to discovery of admissible evidence" standards are applied liberally. Any doubt is generally resolved in favor of permitting discovery, particularly where the precise issues in the case are not yet clearly established. (Colonial Life & Accident Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1982) 31 Cal.3d 785, 790 fns. 7-8.)

Evidence Code section 917 provides at subdivision (a) "Whenever a privilege is claimed on the ground that the matter sought to be disclosed is a communication made in confidence in the course of the ... clergy-penitent, ... relationship, the communication is presumed to have been made in confidence and the opponent of the claim of privilege has the burden of proof to establish that the communication was not confidential." (Italics added.)

[T]he privilege-claimant "has the initial burden of proving the preliminary facts to show the privilege applies." (Story v. Superior Court (2003) 109 Cal.App.4th 1007, 1014, 135 Cal.Rptr.2d 532, italics added.) "Once the claimant establishes the preliminary facts ..., the burden of proof shifts to the opponent of the privilege. To obtain disclosure, the opponent must rebut the statutory presumption of confidentiality set forth in [Evidence Code] section 917[, subdivision (a).] ... Alternatively, the opponent of the privilege may show that the privilege has been waived under [Evidence Code] section 912 !["..."] (Story, supra, at p. 1015, 135 Cal.Rptr.2d 532, italics added.)

(Roman Catholic Archbishop of Los Angeles v. Superior Court (2005) 131 Cal.App.4th 417, 442, footnotes omitted.)

"In order for a statement to be privileged, it must satisfy all of the conceptual requirements of a penitential communication: 1) it must be intended to be in confidence; 2) it must be made to a member of the clergy who in the course of his or her religious discipline or practice is authorized or accustomed to hear such communications; and 3) such member of the clergy has a duty under the discipline or tenets of the church, religious denomination or organization to keep such communications secret. (§ 1032; 2 Jefferson, Cal. Evidence Benchbook (2d ed.1982) § 39.1, pp. 1405-1407.)" (People v. Edwards, supra, 203 Cal.App.3d at pp. 1362-1363, 248 Cal.Rptr. 53, italics added.)

(Roman Catholic Archbishop of Los Angeles, supra, 131 Cal.App.4th at pp. 443-444.)

As to interrogatories nos. 1, 2, and 13-15, plaintiff states that he seeks identifying information necessary to pursue third-party discovery from Roberto's Jehovah's Witness congregation, which maintains documentation of his and Nina's abuse of their children.

Since the interrogatories do not request the content of any communication, but simply ask whether such certain discussions occurred, and where Roberto attends, plaintiff has shown that the interrogatories are within the scope of discovery. Roberto has not met his burden of showing that the interrogatories seek disclosure of privileged communications. No declaration is filed with the motion providing factual evidence showing that answering the interrogatories would disclose penitential communications.

The response to interrogatory 5 is not adequate or Code-compliant. The court reads the response to interrogatory no. 5 as a response claiming inability to respond because Roberto does not know who or what is referenced in the interrogatory. A response stating "inability to respond" is legally insufficient. If the responding party lacks personal knowledge sufficient to respond, the party may so state, but only after making a reasonable and good faith effort to obtain the information by inquiry to other persons or organizations. (See Sinaiko Healthcare Consulting, Inc. v. Pacific Healthcare Consultants (2007) 148 Cal.App.4th 390, 406.) There is no indication that Roberto made any inquiry or effort to understand who or what the interrogatory references. With plaintiff indicating that this comes from a court filing by Roberto, the inquiry should start there.

Regarding interrogatory no. 10, Roberto's responsive separate statement simply asserts without analysis that the information requested is not relevant. Because relevance is not apparent on the face of the interrogatory, plaintiff must initially make some showing that the information sought is relevant and discoverable. Plaintiff argues, "Defendant's relevance objection is unsupported and contradicted by his own prior filings. Defendant Roberto Sr. has affirmatively represented to the court that Robert Jr. holds power of attorney over him. Defendant cannot simultaneously rely on the existence of a power of attorney in court filings and then claim that the date it was acquired is irrelevant or inadmissible. The interrogatory seeks the date on which Defendant contends Robert Jr. acquired that authority. The timing of the alleged power of attorney is directly relevant to Defendant's litigation conduct, including Robert Jr.'s purported authority to act, communicate, and file documents on Defendant's behalf." However, plaintiff does not identify or attach copies of the filings in which these representations were made. Factual assertions in the separate statement or points and authorities need to be backed up with admissible evidence. In law and motion practice, factual evidence is supplied to the court by way of declarations. (Calcor Space Facility, Inc. v. Superior Court (1997) 53 Cal.App.4th 216, 224.) The court must disregard facts stated in unverified memo of points and authorities, unless supported by reference to evidence presented in declarations or otherwise. (Smith, Smith & Kring v. Superior Court (1997) 60 Cal.App.4th 573, 578.) Since plaintiff filed no declaration providing the factual information relied upon, the motion is denied as to interrogatory no. 10. Plaintiff filed the motion, and must provide an adequate basis to grant the motion.

Interrogatory nos. 11 and 21 relate to Nina's disability and/or Alzheimer's disease. The "I do not recall" answer to no. 11 is inadequate, as the response does not indicate that Roberto made a reasonable and good faith effort to obtain the information. (See Sinaiko Healthcare Consulting, Inc. v. Pacific Healthcare Consultants (2007) 148 Cal.App.4th 390, 406.)

As to relevancy, Roberto contends that defendants have not placed their medical condition "at issue" in this case. Plaintiff responds that "Defendant Roberto Sr.

has repeatedly placed Nina Perez's alleged Alzheimer's diagnosis at issue in this litigation. Defendant has filed multiple court documents asserting that Nina suffers from Alzheimer's, has sought to act on her behalf as guardian ad litem, and has answered discovery for her under a claimed power of attorney." But again plaintiff references no specific court filing in which this occurred. The relevance of Nina's current disability or medical condition to plaintiff's claims is not apparent on the face of the interrogatories, and plaintiff fails to back up his factual assertions with evidence.

Inasmuch as the motion is granted for the most part, Roberto's request for sanctions is denied.

Pursuant to California Rules of Court, rule 3.1312(a), and Code of Civil Procedure section 1019.5, subdivision (a), no further written order is necessary.
