Orellana v. Copeland, Jr.

Plaintiff's UNOPPOSED Motion to Compel the Attendance of Defendant at Deposition is GRANTED. Defendant is ordered to provide Plaintiff a date within the next 30 days, on which he will appear for his deposition.

The request for monetary sanctions against Defendant in the amount of $5,700 is DENIED. Because Defendant is self-represented, the Court finds he may not have understood on this occasion that he was subjecting himself to monetary sanctions by not complying with the requirement that he appear for deposition.

In the future, if Plaintiff must file motions to compel compliance with discovery demands (either written discovery or deposition), Defendant may move for issue, or terminating sanctions against Defendant, including striking of his Answer and entry of a default judgment.

There are serious consequences for not complying with the law requiring parties to engage in discovery. Defendant may go to the Self-Help Center at the Los Angeles Law Library to learn the rules of civil discovery.

Plaintiff to give notice and file proof of service of notice.
