Case Number: 24SMCV03288 Hearing Date: August 12, 2026 Dept: I

The court sees no exigency here. If the motion to extend the discovery cut off is denied, then the cut off has already come and gone. If it is granted, then it will be extended. Either way, there is no need to shorten time. There is no current trial date. The original trial date was continued due to the death of counsel. So the only question is whether the new trial will be such that there will not be time for discovery (assuming that the motion is granted). The court will not prejudge that. The court can discuss discovery and the like at the TSC set for 8/24/26, but this ex parte is DENIED. Of course, the underlying motion remains on calendar. That said, if all parties stipulate to extend the discovery cut off, the court would likely be inclined to agree as well.
