LIMITED PROHIBITORY RELIEF

RESPONDING

PARTY: Defendant, JPMorgan Chase Bank, N.A.

RELIEF

REQUESTED

Motion

for Order Granting Limited Prohibitory Relief

SUMMARY

OF ACTION

Defendant

JPMorgan Chase Bank, N.A. froze Plaintiff Nyrika Masjedi's bank accounts after it received a complaint "alleging impropriety concerning settlement proceeds deposited into Plaintiff's account." On January 22, 2026, Plaintiff filed a complaint against Defendant for: (1) Conversion; (2) Tortious Interference with Prospective Economic Advantage; (3) Negligence; (4) Unfair Competition; (5) Negligent Interference with Prospective Economic Advantage; and (6) Declaratory Relief.

RULING: Denied without prejudice.

Plaintiff moves for an order (1) prohibiting Defendant from continuing to classify her funds or accounts as subject to any adverse claim absent a pending judicial action or court order; (2) requiring Defendant to provide written confirmation to Plaintiff on whether any adverse-claim designation or related classification remains in effect on her funds or account; and (3) prohibiting Defendant from conditioning cessation of any adverse-claim designation or release of funds on dismissal of this action or any other non-judicial concession. Defendant opposes the motion, arguing that it has not been served with the summons and complaint, Plaintiff does not have standing to bring the motion because the accounts belong to her corporations, the motion does not seek coherent, proper relief, and the motion is moot because the funds in question have been paid out. Plaintiff's motion is denied without prejudice.

Plaintiff's motion apparently seeks an injunction. "[A] preliminary injunction is an order that is sought by a plaintiff prior to a full adjudication of the merits of its claim." (White v. Davis (2003) 30 Cal.4th 528, 554.) "To obtain a preliminary injunction, a plaintiff ordinarily is required to present evidence of the irreparable injury or interim harm that it will suffer if an injunction is not issued pending an adjudication of the merits." (Id. at p. 554.) "[T]he question whether a preliminary injunction should be granted involves two interrelated factors: (1) the likelihood that the plaintiff will prevail on the merits, and (2) the relative balance of harms that is likely to result from the granting or denial of interim injunctive relief." (Ibid.) Because Plaintiff's motion does not address these factors, her motion is denied without prejudice. Plaintiff may refile and re-serve her motion addressing the applicable standard for the relief sought.

Plaintiff to give notice.
