ANALYSIS:

Cal Interpreting & Translations obtained a default judgment against Fit Vascular in October 2020. It successfully moved to amend the judgment to run against "FIT VASCULAR DBA TLK MEDICAL GROUP AKA TLK MEDICAL GROUP, LLC." The judgment remains unpaid. Cal Interpreting now moves for a charging order against TLK Medical Group, LLC's transferable interest in the unsatisfied judgment.

A lien on a judgment

debtor's interest in a partnership or LLC is created by service of a notice of motion for a charging order on the judgment debtor and on either: (1) all partners or the partnership, or (2)

all members or the LLC. (Code Civ. Proc., § 708.320.) The Court previously continued this hearing to allow Cal Interpreting to comply with this section. Cal Interpreting has since filed proper proof of service of this motion and accompanying documents on judgment debtor Fit Vascular/TLK Medical and its managing members Rio Investments and Keith Reilly.

The problem now is with the substance of Cal Interpreting's request. Corporations Code section 17705.03 charges the transferable interest that a judgment debtor holds in an LLC—the member's right to distributions. (Corp. Code, § 17705.03, subd. (a); Rice v. Downs (2021) 73 Cal.App.5th 213, 226.) In other words, the charging order runs against a judgment debtor that is a member of the LLC, to get that member's distributions from the LLC. Fit Vascular/TLK Medical is the judgment debtor here, not a member of the judgment debtor, and Cal Interpreting asks the Court to charge the transferable interest of TLK Medical. An LLC does not hold a transferable interest in itself. There is no "transferable interest of the judgment debtor" against which a charging order can issue.

Corporations Code section 17705.03 is not the proper mechanism for collecting on a judgment entered against the LLC itself as judgment debtor. (See id., § 17705.03, subd. (f) [this section is the exclusive remedy for satisfying a judgment "against a member or transferee" out of that debtor's transferable interest].)

The Court DENIES Cal Interpreting's motion.
