26VECV02690 4S Corporation v Shouhed

The court is inclined to grant a TRO preventing defendant Shouhed from coming any closer than 100 feet from the property (which needs to be specifically defined) but not to issue a TRO for protection of Mr. Shahriar personally. If Mr. Shahriar seeks individual protection, he may seek a domestic violence protective order or civil harassment restraining order (depending upon their relationship to each other).

Mr. Shouhed would not be prohibited from holding press conferences as long as he personally is at least 100 feet away from the property. However, he may not block or delay, nor may he ask or order anyone to block or delay, anyone's entrance or exit from the property, whether they are on foot, on bicycle, or motorcycle, or scooter, or in a motor vehicle. He may not remove nor ask or order anyone to remove or to give him from the property anyone's personal property, any business equipment, or any money.

This does not limit Mr. Shouhed from exercising his right to free speech, provided that he does so within any City/County's noise restrictions.

Failure to comply with the TRO can result in civil or criminal penalties.

If granted, the TRO will be in effect until the hearing on a preliminary injunction.
