*HEARING ON MOTION IN RE: EXPUNGE LIS PENDENS (RESET FROM 03.06.2026)
FILED BY:
TENTATIVE RULING:

Before the Court is Defendant Hardeep Singh's Motion to Expunge Lis Pendens.

Defendant's unopposed Request for Judicial Notice is granted. (Evid. Code § 452 (d), (h); Fontenot v. Wells Fargo Bank, N.A. (2011) 198 Cal.App.4th 256, 265.)

Factual Allegations and Background

This matter pertains to a foreclosure sale of real property located at 4651 Shetland Way in Antioch, California (the "Property"). Plaintiffs owned the Property. In 2001, they obtained an equity line of credit of $150,000 secured by the Property. (¶ 11.) They also had a mortgage on the Property which they obtained from Citibank. (Ibid.)

Plaintiffs agreed to automatic withdrawal of payments for their mortgage and the line of credit from their checking account. (¶ 14.) At some point in time, the automatic withdrawals created overdraft problems, so they stopped the automatic payments. (¶ 15.) These overdrafts prevented Plaintiffs from refinancing the line of credit. (¶ 16.) Plaintiffs continued to miss payments over the years. (¶¶ 17-19.) They sought a loan modification, but it was denied. (¶ 20.) They attempted to pay off the amount owing under the line of credit, but the bank did not respond. (¶ 21.)

On July 22, 2023, Plaintiffs received a letter indicating that the trustee sale of the Property was being postponed from July 18 to August 29, 2023. (¶ 24.) Plaintiffs again tried to pay off the loan and/or obtain a loan modification, without success. (¶¶ 25-26.)

On or about January 5, 2024, the Property was sold at public auction to Defendant Singh for $315,000. (¶ 28.) Plaintiffs contend they were not given proper notice of the sale. (Ibid.) Thereafter, Defendant Singh sought rent from Plaintiffs and ultimately filed an unlawful detainer against them. (¶¶ 32, 34.)

As a result, Plaintiffs filed their Verified Complaint on April 3, 2024 asserting fourteen causes of action: (1) Set Aside Trustee Sale; (2) Cancellation of Trustee Deed; (3) Quiet Title; (4) Breach of Oral Contract; (5) Breach of Written Contract; (6) Wrongful Foreclosure; (7) Promissory Estoppel; (8) Negligence; (9) Negligent Misrepresentation; (10) Fraud; (11) Violation of the Rosenthal Fair Debt Collection Practices Act; (12) Unfair Business Practices (B&P 17200); (13) Breach of Contract; and (14) Declaratory Relief. After Defendant Singh's demurrer to the Complaint was sustained with leave to amend, Plaintiffs filed the operative First Amended Complaint on December 11, 2024, asserting the same 14 causes of action.

On November 13, 2024, US Bank filed a motion to compel arbitration. The motion was unopposed and the Court granted the motion on May 2, 2025 – ordering the matter to arbitration. On May 28, 2025, Plaintiffs filed a Notice of Lis Pendens. Defendant Singh filed the motion to expunge on October 2, 2025.

On February 6, 2026, the Court continued the hearing on the motion and requested additional briefing on the issue of the Court's jurisdiction to rule on the motion to expunge given that the matter has been compelled to arbitration. Both parties filed supplemental briefs, per the Court's request. The Court will now rule on the Motion.

Legal Standard

"[A] lis pendens is recorded by someone asserting a real property claim, to give notice that a lawsuit has been filed which may, if that person prevails, affect title to or possession of the real property described in the notice." (Federal Deposit Ins. Corp. v. Charlton (1993) 17 Cal.App.4th 1066, 1069, citing CCP §§ 405.2, 405.4, 405.20.) Under Code Civ. Proc. § 405.30, at any time after a notice of pendency of action has been recorded, any party with an interest in the real property may apply to the Court to expunge the notice.

“The expungement statutes provide that a lis pendens may be expunged on three grounds: (1) ‘the pleading on which the notice is based does not contain a real property claim’ (Code Civ. Proc., § 405.31); (2) ‘the claimant has not established by a preponderance of the evidence the probable validity of the real property claim’ (Code Civ. Proc., § 405.32); or (3) ‘adequate relief can be secured to the claimant by the giving of an undertaking’ (Code Civ. Proc., § 405.33).” (Carr v. Rosien (2015) 238 Cal.App.4th 845, 857.) Probable validity is met when the Plaintiff establishes her claim by a preponderance of the evidence. (Code Civ. Proc., § 405.32.)

“Unlike most other motions, when a motion to expunge is brought, the burden is on the party opposing the motion to show the existence of a real property claim.” (Kirkeby v. Superior Court (2004) 33 Cal.4th 642, 647 citing Code Civ. Proc. § 405.30.)

The party prevailing on an expungement motion must be awarded reasonable attorney fees and costs incurred in making or opposing the motion unless the court finds the other party acted with “substantial justification” or that other circumstances make the imposition of attorney fees and costs “unjust.” (Code Civ. Proc., § 405.38.)

Defendant’s Citation to Legal Authority

The Court must begin by noting that it appears that defense counsel may have relied on using Artificial Intelligence (AI) to assist with preparing their Supplemental Brief regarding the Court’s jurisdiction to hear this motion. Many of the citations in their brief either do not exist, do not refer to the correct case, and/or do not stand for the proposition asserted.

In the section titled: “Ruling on Expungement Does Not Intrude on the Arbitrator’s Rule,” counsel cites to four cases: Rubenstein v. Smith (1994) 29 Cal.App.4th 1636, 1646; Berg v. Wiley (1996) 41 Cal.App.4th 1211, 1219; City of San Diego v. Miller (1999) 77 Cal.App.4th 27, 31–32; and La Jolla Beach & Tennis Club, Inc. v. Industrial Indem. Co. (2016) 1 Cal.5th 1, 9–10. None of these cases exist.

Defense counsel cites the first two cases for the proposition that “California courts have consistently recognized that this inquiry [determining if claimant has established ‘probable validity’ of a real property claim] is summary, provisional, and procedural, not a final determination on the merits.” (Brief at 4:22-5:2.) The first citation, 29 Cal.App.4th 1636, 1646 does not refer to a case styled as Rubenstein v. Smith. Instead, it cites to the case of People v. Thompson (1994) 29 Cal.App.4th 1635, which ends on page 1641. The pin cite of 29 Cal.App.4th 1646 actually cites to the case of Fredrics v. Paige (1994) 29 Cal.App.4th 1642, which continues on to page 1650. The only case the Court could find styled as Rubenstein v. Smith is a federal case in the Central District of California – 132 F.Supp.3d 1201. None of the above cases include discussions of a lis pendens or motion to expunge or make any reference to a ruling on such a motion not being a final determination on the merits.

Likewise, 41 Cal.App.4th 1211, 1219 cites to the matter of Arellanes v. Civil Serv. Com. (1995) 41 Cal.App.4th 1208 which runs through page 1218. The pin cite refers to People v. Biddinger (1996) 41 Cal.App.4th 1219. A search in Lexis for the case of Berg v. Wiley fails to identify any California case, or any case with those names in 1996. Again, neither of those cases include discussions of a lis pendens or motion to expunge or make any reference to a ruling on such a motion not being a final determination on the merits.

City of San Diego v. Miller (1999) 77 Cal.App.4th 27, 31–32 also does not exist. The citation refers to Paredes v. Superior Court (1999) 77 Cal.App.4th 24 which goes through page 37. The Court has been unable to find a California case styled as City of San Diego v. Miller. There is a County of San Diego v. Miller (1975) 13 Cal.3d 684, but it also does not support Plaintiff's contention that courts "routinely resolve lis pendens motions at early procedural stages, including alongside demurrers, motions to dismiss, or prior to discovery." (Brief at 5:4-5.)

Finally, La Jolla Beach & Tennis Club, Inc. v. Industrial Indem. Co. (2016) 1 Cal.5th 1, 9–10 is another incorrect citation. Instead, that citation refers to the matter of In re Isaiah W. (2016) 1 Cal.5th 1 which runs through page 20. That matter involves interpretation and application of the federal Indian Child Welfare Act of 1978 – and has nothing to do with a lis pendens or expungement action. Unlike the other citations, there is a case styled as La Jolla Beach & Tennis Club, Inc. v. Industrial Indem. Co., but its correct citation is (1994) 9 Cal.4th 27 and it pertains to discussions of workers' compensation – not any real property issues of lis pendens matters.

In Noland v. Land of the Free, L.P. (2025) 114 Cal. App. 5th 426, a unanimous panel of the Court of Appeal for the Second Appellate District held:

[R]elying on fabricated legal authority is sanctionable. As a district judge recently held when presented with nonexistent precedent generated by ChatGPT: "A fake opinion is not 'existing law' and citation to a fake opinion does not provide a non-frivolous ground for extending, modifying, or reversing existing law, or for establishing new law. An attempt to persuade a court or oppose an adversary by relying on fake opinions is an abuse of the adversary system." (citations omitted) Noland, supra, 114 Cal. App. 5th at 445.

As noted by the Nolan court, it is a fundamental duty of attorneys to read the legal authorities they cite to determine that the authorities stand for the proposition for which they are cited. (Ibid.) Failing to do so is sanctionable conduct.

The court has no direct evidence that counsel for Plaintiff used AI to write the section of the brief at issue. But the citations identified above appear to be fabricated (that is, made up, non-existent), and counsel submitted them to the court. It is unclear whether counsel submitted them knowing they were non-existent, or counsel simply did not read the citations before submitting them. Even the latter is problematic. As the Noland court explained,

To state the obvious, it is a fundamental duty of attorneys to read the legal authorities they cite in appellate briefs or any other court filings to determine that the authorities stand for the propositions for which they are cited. Plainly, counsel did not read the cases he cited before filing his appellate briefs: Had he read them, he would have discovered, as we did, that the cases did not contain the language he purported to quote, did not support the propositions for which they were cited, or did not exist. (See Benjamin v. Costco Wholesale Corp., supra, 779 F.Supp.3d at p. 343 [“an attorney who submits fake cases clearly has not read those nonexistent cases, which is a violation of [the federal equivalent of § 128.7]”]; ... Counsel thus fundamentally abdicated his responsibility to the court and to his client. (See Kleveland v. Siegel & Wolensky, LLP (2013) 215 Cal.App.4th 534, 559 [“‘It is critical to both the bench and the bar that we be able to rely on the honesty of counsel. The term “officer of the court,” with all the assumptions of honor and integrity that append to it, must not be allowed to lose its significance’”].) (Emphasis in original, citation omitted.) Noland, supra, 114 Cal. App. 5th at 445.

In Noland, the court found that “nearly all” of the legal quotations in the plaintiff’s opening brief, and “many” of the quotations in the reply brief were fabricated. (Noland, supra, 114 Cal. App. 5th at 430.) In addition, “many of the cases plaintiff cites do not discuss the topics for which they were cited.” (Id. at 430.)

The Noland court concluded, “Sanctions may be awarded to the respondent to compensate for the costs of responding to a frivolous appeal, or to the clerk of the court for conduct that unnecessarily burdens the court and the taxpayers.” (Noland, supra, 114 Cal. App. 5th at 447.) Counsel in the Nolan case was sanctioned $10,000 payable to the court, the attorney was directed to serve a copy of the court’s order on his client, and the clerk of the court was directed to serve a copy of the court’s opinion on the State Bar.

The Court does not take kindly to the submission of improper and non-existent legal authority. It drastically increases the Court’s work by requiring extra time to review and confirm each and every one of counsel’s citations. The Court is notifying counsel that it will be issuing an order to show cause why they should not be sanctioned for these actions.

Analysis

Jurisdiction

“[A] lis pendens may only be recorded when an action is pending in state or federal court.” (Manhattan Loft, LLC v. Mercury Liquors, Inc. (2009) 173 Cal.App.4th 1040, 1051.) To obtain an expungement order, ‘any time after notice of pendency of action has been recorded, any party ... may apply to the court in which the action is pending to expunge the notice.’ (Code

Civ. Proc. § 405.30.)

The motion to expunge is “confine[d] ... to the court where ‘the action’ of which notice has been recorded is pending to avoid inconsistent judgments and forum shopping.” (The Formula Inc. v. Superior Court (2008) 168 Cal.App.4th 1455, 1464.) As such, only the court where the notice of pendency was filed can hear a motion to expunge.

Plaintiffs argue that once the Court ordered the matter to arbitration it lost the ability to rule on the motion to expunge. They contend that the Court only has “to deal with a very limited set of issues including intervening if parties are unable to select an Arbitrator, to confirm, correct or vacate an arbitration award,” and expungement of a lis pendens is not one of those functions. (Brief at 2:3-9.)

Although the matter has been compelled to arbitration, there is still a state action pending in this Court. While the Court ‘shall’ stay an action sent to arbitration until the arbitration is concluded, it must do so only “upon motion of a party to such action or proceeding....” (Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.4.) Neither party requested a stay, and the Court has not issued a stay.

As Plaintiff’s authority states: “Once a court grants [a] petition to compel arbitration and stays the action at law, the action at law sits in the twilight zone of abatement with the trial court retaining merely a vestigial jurisdiction over the matters submitted to arbitration....” (Lew-Williams v. Petrosian (2024) 101 Cal.App.5th 97, 105.) Importantly, the instant matter has not been stayed. As neither party requested a stay, the Court can infer that the parties did not want to divest the Court of all ability to address issues between the parties while the arbitration proceeded.

As noted above, only the Court can hear the motion to expunge the lis pendens. (The Formula Inc., supra, 168 Cal.App.4th at 1464.) It would be unreasonable for a party to have no recourse to challenge the validity of a lis pendens while an arbitration was pending. This is especially true here.

Plaintiff filed his initial complaint on April 3, 2024. On June 24, 2024, Defendant Singh demurred to the Complaint. On November 13, 2024, US Bank filed a motion to compel arbitration. Defendant Singh’s demurrer was sustained with leave to amend on November 15, 2024. The operative FAC was filed on December 11, 2024. The Court granted the unopposed motion to compel arbitration on May 2, 2025. The notice of lis pendens was filed almost a month later – on May 28, 2025, almost a year after the initial complaint.

Plaintiff waited almost a year after the initial complaint, over six months after the motion to compel arbitration was filed, and almost a month after the motion to compel was granted to file the notice of lis pendens. Waiting so long to file a notice of lis pendens, especially after the matter is ordered to arbitration, then claiming the Court cannot rule on a motion to expunge raises issues of due process and appears to be legal gamesmanship by Plaintiff. It would be unreasonably prejudicial to a defendant not to be able to challenge an improper notice of lis pendens just because the plaintiff waited until the matter was sent to arbitration before he filed it.

The reason for limiting the court's jurisdiction during the pendency of the arbitration is to prevent a court from interfering with the arbitration. This concern is not relevant since the arbitrator has no authority to consider the motion to expunge. Furthermore, the Code allows for a party to seek expungement of a lis pendens "[a]t any time after notice of pendency of action has been recorded." (Code Civ. Proc. § 405.30.)

Based on the above, the Court finds that it does have jurisdiction to rule on the Plaintiff's motion to expunge the lis pendens.

Expungement

A "lis pendens may be expunged if the action does not contain a real property claim or the claimant fails to establish the probable validity of the real property claim." (Newell v. Superior Court (2024) 107 Cal.App.5th 728, 735 quoting De Martini v. Superior Court (2024) 98 Cal.App.5th 1269, 1275.)

Real Property Claim

As to the first ground, "the court must expunge a lis pendens if the court finds the pleading on which the lis pendens is based does not contain a real property claim." (Newell, 107 Cal.App.5th at 735.) "In determining whether a pleading contains a real property claim, the court engages in 'a demurrer-like analysis.'" (Ibid. quoting Kirkeby v. Superior Court (2004) 33 Cal.4th 642, 647-48.) "Rather than analyzing whether the pleading states any claim at all, as on a general demurrer, the court must undertake the more limited analysis of whether the pleading states a real property claim." (Kirkeby, 33 Cal.4th at 648 citations omitted.) "Review 'involves only a review of the adequacy of the pleading and normally should not involve evidence from either side, other than possibly that which may be judicially noticed as on a demurrer.'" (Ibid. citations omitted.)

A 'real property claim' is defined, as relevant here, as "the causes of action in a pleading which would, if meritorious, affect (a) title to, or the right to possession of, specific real property" (Code Civ. Proc. § 405.4.) The FAC sets forth several causes of action which assert real property claims. These include the claim to (1) set aside trustee sale, (2) cancel the trustee deed, and (3) quiet title to the Property. In fact, a party is required to file a lis pendens "upon commencement of" a quiet title action. (Code Civ. Proc. § 761.010.) As there is at least one cause of action that asserts a real property claim, the first prong of the expungement analysis is met.

Defendant Singh argues that there is no real property claim asserted against him. The FAC clearly asserts the three above claims against Mr. Singh. As to the argument that Mr. Singh already prevailed in the unlawful detainer action against Plaintiffs, Mr. Singh fails to provide any evidence that issues pertaining to the title of the Property were addressed in that matter. The Judgment shows that Mr. Singh was entitled to possession of the Property and holdover damages – which would follow given the deed showing he owns the Property. It does not, however, indicate whether the parties litigated the validity of the deed in that proceeding – which would not normally occur. That is the basis of this separate proceeding. To determine the validity of the sale and the deed.

Based on the above, the Court finds that the FAC contains a real property claim.

Probability of Prevailing

“‘If the claimant does plead a real property claim, but the claim pleaded has no evidentiary merit, the lis pendens must be expunged upon motion under [Code of Civil Procedure §] 405.32.’ [Citation.]” (La Jolla Group II v. Bruce (2012) 211 Cal.App.4th 461, 475; see also Amalgamated Bank v. Superior Court (2007) 149 Cal.App.4th 1003, 1011-1012.) Under section 405.32, “the court shall order that the notice be expunged if the court finds that the claimant has not established by a preponderance of the evidence the probable validity of the real property claim.” “Probable validity” means “it is more likely than not that the [plaintiff] will obtain a judgment against the defendant on the claim.” (Code of Civil Procedure §405.3.)

To determine probable validity the court must look beyond the Plaintiff’s pleadings and examine the factual merit of the claim – in effect, forecast the probable outcome at trial. In essence, the Code “requires a minitrial on the merits for making a probable validity finding, not a ‘quasi demurrer-like analysis.’” (De Martini v. Superior Court (2024) 98 Cal.App.5th 1269, 1280.) “Nothing in the statute indicates the claimant is only required to make a prima facie case regarding the probable validity of the real property claim. Rather, the statute expressly states the standard is preponderance of the evidence.” (Ibid. citing Cal. Code Civ. Proc. § 405.32.)

The essence of each of Plaintiffs’ real property claims rests on the allegations that the Trustee’s Sale occurred without proper notice to the Plaintiffs and due to US Bank’s failure to follow proper procedures in moving forward with the sale.

It is undisputed that Mr. Singh purchased the Property at a nonjudicial foreclosure sale. “As a general rule, the purchaser at a nonjudicial foreclosure sale receives title under a trustee’s deed free and clear of any right, title or interest of the trustor.” (Moeller v. Lien (1994) 25 Cal.App.4th 822, 831.) “A properly conducted nonjudicial foreclosure sale constitutes a final adjudication of the rights of the borrower and lender.” (Ibid.)

“The purchaser at a foreclosure sale takes title by a trustee’s deed. If the trustee’s deed recites that all statutory notice requirements and procedures required by law for the conduct of the foreclosure have been satisfied, a rebuttable presumption arises that the sale has been conducted regularly and properly; this presumption is conclusive as to a bona fide purchaser.” (Ibid.)

A ‘bona fide purchaser’ “is one who pays value for the property without notice of any adverse interest or of any irregularity in the sale proceedings.” (Melendrez v. D&I Investments, Inc. (2005) 127 Cal.App.4th 1238, 1250.) “The elements of bona fide purchase are payment of value, in good faith, and without actual or constructive notice of another’s rights.” (Id. at 1251 quoting Gates Rubber Co. v. Ulman (1989) 214 Cal.App.3d 356, 364.) “It is ‘black-letter law’ that a bona fide purchaser for value who acquires his or her interest in real property without knowledge or notice of another’s prior rights or interest in the property takes the property free of such unknown interests.” (Vasquez v. LBS Financial Credit Union (2020) 52 Cal.App.5th 97, 107 quoting In re Marriage of Cloney (2001) 91 Cal.App.4th 429,437.)

Defendant Singh presents evidence that he purchased the Property at a publicly conducted nonjudicial Trustee’s Sale. (Singh Decl. ¶ 2, RJN Ex. 3.) After he was the successful bidder at the sale, a Trustee’s Deed Upon Sale was issued to him and recorded, transferring title to him. (Singh Decl. ¶ 3, RJN Ex. 3.) The Trustee’s Deed Upon Sale includes specific language indicating that all notice requirements were complied with. (RJN Ex. 3.) Mr. Singh attests that he had no actual or constructive knowledge of any alleged defects, disputes, or irregularities concerning the foreclosure sale. (Singh Decl. ¶ 4.) He never had any contact with Plaintiffs or US Bank prior to the sale, nor did he have any information regarding any loan modification dispute between those parties. (Ibid.) He also paid fair value for the Property in the amount of $315,000. (Ibid.; RJN Ex. 3.)

In opposition, Plaintiffs present some arguments but provide no evidence to counter the above evidence presented by Mr. Singh. There is no declaration disputing any of the above, nor are there any objections to the admissibility of the above evidence. None of Plaintiffs’ arguments address Defendant’s contentions related to being a bona fide purchaser and the presumption that means he has taken title to the Property “free of” any claims by Plaintiffs. Instead, their arguments discuss first and second mortgages and lien priority. None of these issues undermine Defendant Singh’s right to title to the Property as a bona fide purchaser.

Under section 405.32, “the court shall order that the notice be expunged if the court finds that the claimant has not established by a preponderance of the evidence the probable validity of the real property claim.” Plaintiffs have failed to meet this requirement.

Based on the above, Defendant Singh’s motion to expunge the lis pendens is granted.

Attorney Fees

California Code of Civil Procedure section 405.38 provides:

The court shall direct that the party prevailing on [a motion to expunge a lis pendens] be awarded the reasonable attorney's fees and costs of making or opposing the motion unless the court finds that the other party acted with substantial justification or that other circumstances make the imposition of attorney's fees and costs unjust.

Defendant requests attorney fees in the amount of $4,200.00 based on their time spent preparing the initial motion, and expected time spent preparing the reply and attending the hearing on the matter, which totaled seven hours. (Garabedian Decl. ¶ 5.) Counsel indicates their rate is $600 per hour. (Id. ¶¶ 4-5.) Plaintiffs do not oppose or even address this request in their opposition.

The Court finds that Defendant Singh is the prevailing party as his motion is being granted. The Court also finds that Defendant's request for attorney's fees is reasonable. As such, the Court awards Defendant $4,200 in attorney's fees.

Conclusion

Defendant's motion to expunge the lis pendens is granted. As the prevailing party, Defendant is awarded $4,200 in attorneys' fees, payable within 30 days of service of notice of entry of this order.

4. 9:00 AM CASE NUMBER: C24-01447
CASE NAME: PAMELA MILLER VS. COSTCO WHOLESALE CORPORATION
HEARING ON SUMMARY MOTION
FILED BY: COSTCO WHOLESALE CORPORATION
TENTATIVE RULING:

Defendant Costco Wholesale Corporation ("Defendant") brings the instant motion for summary judgment ("Motion") against the complaint of plaintiff Pamela Miller ("Plaintiff"). Plaintiff asserts claims against Defendant for: (1) negligence; (2) premises liability; and (3) negligent hiring, training, supervision, and retention of employees or agents, arising out of an incident involving boxes falling on her foot at a Costco location.

For the reasons discussed below, the Court DENIES Defendant's Motion.

Legal Standard for Motion for Summary Judgment

Code of Civil Procedure ("CCP") § 437c, subds. (o)(1) and (p)(2) provide the relevant legal standard for deciding Defendant's Motion. Section 437c(o)(1) provides, in relevant part:

A cause of action has no merit if one or more of the elements of the cause of action cannot be separately established, even if that element is separately pleaded.
