The Court is inclined to GRANT attorney's fees and appropriate costs but observes that the amount requested by plaintiff's counsel—more than $115,000—is far outside the range of awards that this Court has given in dozens upon dozens of other similar motions. The Court further notes that the amount requested is far beyond what similarly situated manufacturers in cases with nearly identical procedural histories have requested.

The Court will hear from plaintiff's counsel why the request in this case is so far out the heartland of requests in nearly identical cases.

The Court is not inclined to apply a multiplier. The plaintiff has failed to point to any aspect of this case that was novel or required a special level of skill or experience.

As noted above, the Court's view is that the demand is, on its face, excessive. The Court's inclination, governed by its experience in previous cases, having handled hundreds of similar cases, is to grant a total award closer to $30,000, plus costs.
