DEMURRER WITH MOTION TO STRIKE

MOVING

PARTY: Defendant, General Motors LLC

RESPONDING

PARTY: Plaintiff, Stephanie Long

RELIEF

REQUESTED

Demurrer

to Fifth Cause of Action in First Amended Complaint

Motion

to Strike

SUMMARY OF ACTION

This

is a lemon law action. Plaintiff Stephanie Long sued Defendant General Motors LLC alleging Defendant failed to promptly replace her 2016 Chevrolet Camaro or make restitution after it was unable to conform the car to its express warranty after a reasonable number of repair attempts. Plaintiff also alleges Defendant fraudulently induced the sale of the car by concealing the existence of a transmission defect.

RULING

Demurrer: Overruled.

Defendant demurs to the fifth cause of action in Plaintiff's First Amended Complaint for fraudulent inducement by concealment. It argues that the claim is barred by the statute of limitations, Plaintiff does not plead her claim with requisite particularity, and Plaintiff does not allege a transactional relationship giving rise to a duty to disclose. Plaintiff filed a 2-court-day late opposition, denying her claim is untimely and maintaining the sufficiency of the allegations in support of her fraud claim. (Code Civ. Proc., § 1005, subd. (b).) Because the Court finds Defendant was not prejudiced by the tardy filing, it considers the opposition in ruling on the demurrer. Defendant's demurrer is overruled.

demurrer is an objection to a pleading, the grounds for which are apparent from either the face of the complaint or a matter of which the court may take judicial notice. (Code Civ. Proc., § 430.30, subd. (a); see also Blank v. Kirwan (1985) 39 Cal.3d 311, 318.) The purpose of a demurrer is to challenge the sufficiency of a pleading "by raising questions of law." (Postley v. Harvey (1984) 153 Cal.App.3d 280, 286.) "In the construction of a pleading, for the purpose of determining its effect, its allegations must be liberally construed, with a view to substantial justice between the parties." (Code Civ. Proc., § 452.) The court "treat[s] the demurrer as admitting all material facts properly pleaded, but not contentions, deductions or conclusions of fact or law" (Berkley v. Dowds (2007) 152 Cal.App.4th 518, 525.) In applying these standards, the court liberally construes the complaint to determine whether a cause of action has been stated. (Picton v. Anderson Union High School Dist. (1996) 50 Cal.App.4th 726, 733.) "If the complaint states a cause of action under any theory, regardless of the title under which the factual basis for relief is stated, that aspect of the complaint is good against a demurrer." (Quelimane Co. v. Stewart Title Guaranty Co. (1998) 19 Cal.4th 26, 38.)

Plaintiff's claim is not barred by the statute of limitations. "A demurrer based on a statute of limitations will not lie where the action may be, but is not necessarily, barred. [Citation.] In order for the bar ... to be raised by demurrer, the defect must clearly and affirmatively appear on the face of the complaint; it is not enough that the complaint shows that the action may be barred." (Com. for Green Foothills v. Santa Clara County Bd. of Supervisors (2010) 48 Cal.4th 32, 42.) The statute of limitations for fraud is three years. (Code Civ. Proc., § 338, subd. (d).) The cause of action does not accrue "until the discovery, by the aggrieved party, of the facts constituting the fraud or mistake." (Ibid.) Here, the face of the complaint does not affirmatively show that the fraud claim is barred because no facts indicate when Plaintiff discovered, or reasonably should have discovered, Defendant's alleged fraud. The mere fact that "[d]efects and nonconformities to warranty manifested themselves within the applicable express warranty period" does not mean that Plaintiff discovered or was put on notice of the alleged fraudulent omission at that time. [FAC ¶ 11.] The fraud claim is thus not barred by the statute of limitations.

Defendant next argues that Plaintiff fails to plead her fraud claim with requisite particularity because she does not allege the specific facts Defendant failed to disclose and the advertisements or materials it could have disclosed such facts. Defendant further contends that Plaintiff does not allege Defendant's knowledge of the omitted facts, its intent to defraud, and a transactional relationship sufficient to trigger a duty to disclose.

"The required elements for fraudulent concealment are (1) concealment or suppression of a material fact; (2) by a defendant with a duty to disclose the fact; (3) the defendant intended to defraud the plaintiff by intentionally concealing or suppressing the fact; (4) the plaintiff was unaware of the fact and would have acted differently if the concealed or suppressed fact was known; and (5) plaintiff sustained damage as a result of the concealment or suppression of the material fact.” (Rattagan v. Uber Technologies, Inc. (2024) 17 Cal.5th 1, 40.) As with all other fraud claims, fraudulent concealment must be pled with specificity “even though the focus of inquiry shifts to the unique elements of the claim.” (Id. at p. 43.) Mere conclusory allegations are insufficient. (Id. at p. 44.)

duty to disclose may arise if “the material facts are known or accessible only to defendant, and defendant knows those facts are not known or reasonably discoverable by plaintiff (i.e., exclusive knowledge).” (Rattagan, supra, 17 Cal.5th at p. 40.) This circumstance presupposes “a preexisting relationship between the parties, such as ‘between seller and buyer, employer and prospective employee, doctor and patient, or parties entering into any kind of contractual agreement. All of these relationships are created by transactions between parties from which a duty to disclose facts material to the transaction arises under certain circumstances.’” (Id. at pp. 40-41, quoting LiMandri v. Judkins (1997) 52 Cal.App.4th 326, 337.) “If the duty allegedly arose by virtue of the parties’ relationship and defendant’s exclusive knowledge or access to certain facts . . . the complaint must also include specific allegations establishing all the required elements, including (1) the content of the omitted facts, (2) defendant’s awareness of the materiality of those facts, (3) the inaccessibility of the facts to plaintiff, (4) the general point at which the omitted facts should or could have been revealed, and (5) justifiable and actual reliance, either through action or forbearance, based on the defendant’s omission.” (Id. at pp. 43-44.)

Defendant’s

particularity arguments are unavailing. The specific fact Defendant allegedly failed to disclose was the existence of a defect in the 8-speed transmission “that can result in (1) hesitation or delayed acceleration, (2) harsh or hard shifting, (3) jerking, (4) shuddering, or juddering; (5) surging and/or inability to control the vehicle’s speed, acceleration, or deceleration, (6) symptoms requiring reprogramming of the transmission control module (“TCM”) and/or powertrain control module (“PCM”), (7) failure or replacement of the transmission.” [FAC ¶ 61.] Defendant presents no authority requiring Plaintiff to allege what manner the disclosure should have been made; it suffices that disclosure should have been made at the time of sale. Plaintiff also alleges that Defendant had knowledge of the defect “through sources not available to consumers such as Plaintiff, including but not limited to pre-production and post-production testing data; early consumer complaints about the Transmission Defect made directly to Defendant GM and its network of dealers; aggregate warranty data compiled from Defendant GM's network of dealers; testing conducted by Defendant GM in response to these complaints; as well as warranty repair and part replacements data received by Defendant GM from Defendant GM's network of dealers, amongst other sources of internal information.” [Id. ¶ 62.] And Plaintiff pleads intent to defraud because Defendant omitted the existence of the defect to induce the sale of the car. [Id. ¶¶ 67-69.] Defendant's particularity challenges thus do not defeat Plaintiff's fraud claim.

Plaintiff further alleges a special relationship sufficient to trigger a duty to disclose. She alleges that on or about March 7, 2016, she entered into a “warranty contract” with Defendant regarding her car. [FAC ¶ 6.] Such a contractual relationship may support a duty to disclose on behalf of Defendant. (Rattagan, supra, 17 Cal.5th at pp. 40-41.) Defendant's provision of a warranty to Plaintiff is not a transaction between Defendant and “the public at large” as Defendant provided the warranty directly to Plaintiff. (Id. at p. 41.) Plaintiff has thus alleged a special relationship between her and Defendant. Defendant's demurrer to the fraudulent inducement claim is therefore overruled.

Motion to Strike: Denied.

Defendant moves to strike Plaintiff's prayer for punitive damages in sub-paragraph “g” of her prayer for relief. It argues that Plaintiff's fraud claim fails and her punitive damages claim falls with it. Plaintiff does not oppose the motion. The motion to strike is denied because Plaintiff pleads a fraud claim that forms the basis of her punitive damages request.

To support punitive damages, the plaintiff's complaint “must allege ultimate facts of the defendant's oppression, fraud, or malice.” (Cyrus v. Haveson (1976) 65 Cal.App.3d 306, 316-17; Civ. Code, § 3294, subd. (a).) “Fraud” is “an intentional misrepresentation, deceit, or concealment of a material fact known to the defendant with the intention on the part of the defendant of thereby depriving a person of property or legal rights or otherwise causing injury.” (Civ. Code, § 3294, subd. (c)(3).)

As explained in the Court's ruling on Defendant's demurrer, Defendant's challenge to Plaintiff's fraudulent inducement by concealment claim fails. The fraud cause of action is sufficient to support Plaintiff's punitive damages claim. (Stevens v. Superior Court (1986) 180 Cal.App.3d 605, 610.) Thus, Plaintiff has sufficiently alleged facts to support her punitive damages claim against Defendant and the motion to strike is denied.
