Tentative

Ruling

Plaintiff's Motion

For Leave to File a First Amended Complaint is GRANTED.

Background

This case arises from the defendants' alleged disturbance of "Plaintiff's peace" and "reasonable fear for personal safety and business operations." More specifically, Plaintiff YUZHENG CHEN alleges that Defendants ZHENZHEN LI and XIAOHUA CUI came to her residence, which is a daycare. Facility, and "displayed unusual behavior by lying on the ground during the disturbance."

On May 4, 2026, Plaintiff filed suit for:

1. Civil Harassment Restraining Order
2. Intentional inflict of Emotional Distress (IIED)
3. Interference with Business Operations

On June 2, 2026, Defendants filed their answer and a cross-complaint (CC) against Plaintiff. (No COAs were checked/asserted in the CC.)

On June 22, 2026, Plaintiff filed her answer to the CC.

On September 1, 2026, Plaintiff filed the instant motion.

Discussion^[1]

Plaintiff seeks leave to amend to “clarify the factual allegations, distinguishes the conduct of Defendant ZHENZHEN LI from the conduct of Defendant XIAOHUA CUI, incorporates additional facts and evidence learned or obtained after the original Complaint was filed, clarifies Plaintiff’s causes of action, and states Plaintiff’s requested damages and injunctive relief.”

As the motion is unopposed such that there are no concerns with undue delay and prejudice and as there is a liberal policy in granting such motions, the court finds good cause to grant the motion.

Conclusion

Based on the foregoing, the motion is granted.

[1] The motion does not comply with CRC Rule 3.1324 which requires that a proposed amended complaint be filed, including that it be redlined. However, as the complaint is rather brief, the court exercises its discretion to overlook this defect.
