CIVSB2523396

Vasquez v. Green

TENTATIVE RULING(S):

I. Background

Plaintiff Ivan N. Vasquez ("Plaintiff") sues Defendant Circle Green, Inc. dba Beneficial Ag Services ("Defendant") for general negligence and premises liability arising out of an incident on October 19, 2023 at 8271 Chino Ave, Ontario, California (the "Premises"). Plaintiff alleges that while working in the course and scope of his employment with Custom Lumber Designs to haul and unload gravel/mulch, he was injured when material was dumped from Defendant's loader while he was rolling/unwinding/opening a tarp on an 18-wheeler trailer.

Defendant moves for summary judgment.

II. Request for Judicial Notice

Defendant requests judicial notice of six items: (1) Defendant's Answer; (2) Plaintiff's verified responses to requests for admissions; (3) Plaintiff's verified responses to special interrogatories; (4) Plaintiff's verified responses to requests for production; (5) Plaintiff's workers' compensation claim and compromise and release; and (6) Plaintiff's qualified medical examination report.

The Court DENIES Defendant's request. The Court need not judicially notice its own records.

Further, discovery responses are not a proper basis for judicial notice and are instead addressed through the evidentiary rules governing admissibility at summary judgment.

III. Evidentiary Objections

Plaintiff objects to certain testimony in the declaration of Defendant's site manager, Jackie Kuhlman.

The Court RULES as follows:

1. Kuhlman Decl. ¶ 25 — Overruled
2. Kuhlman Decl. ¶ 27 — Sustained (improper lay opinion)
3. Kuhlman Decl. ¶ 30 — Overruled
4. Kuhlman Decl. ¶ 31 — Overruled
5. Kuhlman Decl. ¶ 32 — Overruled
6. Kuhlman Decl. ¶ 33 — Overruled

IV. Legal Standards

A negligence-based claim requires proof of duty, breach, causation, and damages. Premises liability is treated under the same negligence framework.

Where the injured worker is employed by an independent contractor, the hirer's tort liability is governed by the doctrine established in Privette v. Superior Court and its subsequent development. Under Privette, an independent contractor's employee generally may not recover tort damages from the hirer for work-related injuries because responsibility for workplace safety is presumed to be delegated to the contractor.

However, Privette recognizes exceptions, including where the hirer exercises retained control in a manner that affirmatively contributes to the injury (Hooker), as further refined by Sandoval to require: (1) retained control actually exercised over the contracted work's manner of performance, and (2) affirmative contribution to the injury through that control, including inducement of the injury-causing conduct rather than merely failing to prevent it.

V. Discussion

A. Privette generally applies

The material facts for purposes of this motion show that Plaintiff was employed by Custom Lumber Designs at the time of the incident, and Custom Lumber Designs was an independent contractor hired by Defendant. Defendant argues that, as a result, Plaintiff's claims are barred by Privette unless an exception applies.

The Court agrees that Privette would bar the claims unless Plaintiff establishes a recognized exception.

B. Hooker/Sandoval exception—retained control actually exercised with affirmative contribution Plaintiff contends that the exception applies because Defendant's loader operator was in actual control of the loading process that caused the injury. Defendant, through Kuhlman's declaration, asserts that Defendant did not require or permit the relevant tarp handling in the loading area and did not control how drivers operated their trucks or tarp systems; Defendant also maintains that loading could be stopped or delayed and that Defendant did not provide defective equipment.

In evaluating summary judgment, the Court must view the evidence in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party. Here, Plaintiff points to deposition testimony describing that:

- Plaintiff gave hand signals to the loader operator to hold and to indicate the opening status of the tarp;
- the loader operator acknowledged the signals; and
- the loader dumped approximately 5,000 pounds of material before Plaintiff could signal loading to begin, while the tarp was only partially opened.

Plaintiff further explains the mechanism of injury: the tarp was struck and pulled toward the trailer bed while Plaintiff was holding the tarp bar, throwing Plaintiff approximately eight feet and causing injuries to his knees and lower back.

On this record, the Court finds a genuine dispute as to whether Defendant's agent/operator actually exercised retained control over aspects of the manner of the work—specifically the timing and execution of the loading conduct that directly preceded the injury—and whether that control affirmatively contributed to the injury under Sandoval. The Court cannot resolve these disputes at summary judgment.

Defendant's arguments about the lack of control over tarp/un-tarping and about the general ability to stop loading do not eliminate the triable issues created by Plaintiff's evidence regarding the interaction between Plaintiff's signals and the operator's loading actions, and the causal sequence between the loading conduct and the injury.

C. Summary judgment is therefore inappropriate

Because Plaintiff has presented evidence sufficient to raise a triable issue of material fact regarding the Hooker/Sandoval retained-control exception to Privette, Defendant has not shown that it is entitled to judgment as a matter of law.

VI. Conclusion / Order

For the reasons stated above, the Court ORDERS as follows:

1. Defendant's Request for Judicial Notice Nos. 1–6 is DENIED.
2. Plaintiff's evidentiary objections are OVERRULED in part and SUSTAINED in part, as follows: Kuhlman Decl. ¶ 25 overruled; ¶ 27 sustained; ¶¶ 30–33 overruled.
3. Defendant's Motion for Summary Judgment is DENIED.

There is a triable issue of material fact whether the Privette doctrine is inapplicable under the retained-control exception under Hooker, as refined by Sandoval.

Tinoco v. Lyft

TENTATIVE RULING(S):

Before the Court is Defendant Lyft's motion to compel Plaintiff to arbitrate her claims and stay the proceedings as to Lyft. Plaintiff opposes. Lyft replies.

Legal Standard

California law favors enforcement of valid arbitration agreements, and doubts are resolved against the party opposing arbitration. The Federal Arbitration Act likewise authorizes enforcement of arbitration clauses, absent legal or equitable grounds for revocation of the contract. When a petition to compel arbitration is filed with prima facie evidence of a written arbitration agreement, the Court must first determine whether an agreement exists. The moving
