MOTION FOR PROTECTIVE ORDER

TENTATIVE RULING:

Defendants Kevin Yip, Katy Yip, Sau Chun Ng, and Q.S. International Logistics, Inc.'s Motion for Protective Order is DENIED.

The court has already granted the motion to seal.

Plaintiff's objections to evidence are OVERRULED.

A leading case explains the requirements of plaintiff's identification of its trade secret:

The Uniform Trade Secrets Act (Civ.Code, § 3426, et seq.) creates a statutory cause of action for the misappropriation of a trade secret. (See 13 Witkin, Summary of Cal. Law (10th ed. 2005) Equity, § 86, p. 382, et seq.) It defines a trade secret as “information, including a formula, pattern, compilation, program, device, method, technique, or process, that: [¶] (1) Derives independent economic value, actual or potential, from not being generally known to the public or to other persons who can obtain economic value from its disclosure or use; and [¶] (2) Is the subject of efforts that are reasonable under the circumstances to maintain its secrecy.” (Civ.Code, § 3426.1, subd. (d).)

When adopting the Uniform Trade Secrets Act in 1984, the California Legislature also enacted a separate statutory provision, now found in section 2019.210 (part of the Civil Discovery Act), which requires, in relevant part, that “[i]n any action alleging the misappropriation of a trade secret under [the Uniform Trade Secrets Act], ... before commencing discovery relating to the trade secret, the party alleging the misappropriation shall identify the trade secret with reasonable particularity.” (Italics added; see Computer Economics, Inc. v. Gartner Group Inc. (1999) 50 F.Supp.2d 980, 984–986 (Computer Economics) [discussing legislative history of former section 2019, subd. (d)].) The statute was intended to codify Diodes, Inc. v. Franzen (1968) 260 Cal.App.2d 244, 251–252, 67 Cal.Rptr. 19 (Diodes), that before a trade secret defendant must submit to potentially costly litigation and discovery, “the complainant should describe the subject matter of the trade secret with sufficient particularity to separate it from matters of general knowledge in the trade or of special knowledge of those persons who are skilled in the trade, and to permit the defendant to ascertain at least the boundaries within which the secret lies.” (Id. at p. 253, 67 Cal.Rptr. 19.) The purpose of such a requirement, as expressed in Diodes,
