On May 26, 2026, plaintiffs Ky Jung Nam and NKJ Investment LLC (collectively, "Plaintiffs") filed this motion for an award of attorney's fees, costs, and expenses pursuant to Civil Code § 1794(d) in the amount of $23,190.48, consisting of $21,737 in fees and $1,453.48 in costs and expenses. Defendant General Motors LLC ("Defendant") filed an opposition brief on June 9, 2026. Plaintiffs filed a reply brief on June 15,

Plaintiffs' counsel, M. Nicholas Nita, attaches billing records showing that his firm's paralegal bills at an hourly rate of $250, a legal assistant bills at an hourly rate of $150, and he himself bills at an hourly rate of $625. (Nita Decl., Ex. A.) Defendant does not challenge the reasonableness of rates but argues that fees should be disallowed for certain billing entries. (Opp., pp. 4-5.) Defendant argues that the Court should find at least 32.9 hours of work to be unreasonably incurred and that Plaintiffs' counsel should not be awarded more than $10,787.50, representing 27.7 hours in fees. Each category is discussed below.

First, Defendant argues that Plaintiff's counsel cannot recover for 0.7 hours of "pre-engagement" work. This work includes "time spent evaluating a potential client prior to engagement."

The argument is unpersuasive because this amount of time is incurred as part of the "commencement and prosecution" of Plaintiffs' case, which is allowable under Civil Code § 1794.

Second, Defendant argues that the total amount of time billed for preparing the Complaint is unreasonable. Mr. Nita spent 0.2 hours to review and revise the Complaint after a paralegal, Jovanna Garay, spent 1.5 hours to prepare a template for the complaint, summons, and civil case cover sheet for filing, as well as to research the dealer and the proper jurisdiction for this case. Defendant argues that Plaintiffs' counsel should not have taken more than 15 minutes to change the caption and the vehicle information on the templated document and requests a reduction of 1.4 hours (or $387.50).

In opposition, Plaintiffs argue that spending 1.5 hours to prepare the Complaint and filing papers is reasonable because templates do not eliminate the need for work including summarizing the vehicle's repair history, reviewing the purchase contract, researching any preexisting recalls or class actions, researching the proper venue, conducting interviews with clients, as well as the actual filing of the document. (Reply, p. 4.) The problem with Plaintiffs' argument is that this work is encompassed in other billing entries. Therefore, Defendant's request to strike 1.3 hours at an hourly rate of $250, for a total of $325, from the requested fee award is granted.

Third, Defendant argues that Plaintiffs' counsel unreasonably billed 3 hours to prepare discovery requests and PMQ notices and should have only billed 0.4 hours. The entries challenged are those billed for work performed on September 10 & 11, 2024; October 2, 2024; March 24, 2025, by a paralegal, Madalina Costescu. The Court deducts the time billed for clerical and administrative work including serving documents (0.2 billed on September 11, 2024, 0.2 billed on October 2, 2024, 0.2 on March 24, 2025), calendaring (0.1 billed on the aforementioned three days) for a total reduction of $225, consisting of 0.9 at an hourly rate of $250.

Fourth, Defendant argues counsel should not have billed 4.4 hours reviewing its discovery requests and preparing Plaintiffs' responses. Defendant reasons that it should have taken only 1 hour to prepare responses because Defendant's discovery requests are virtually identical in every case and Plaintiffs' responses should have been identical as well. Defendant cannot propound voluminous discovery and then complain when Plaintiffs are required to expend time to respond to them, especially when Plaintiffs cannot necessarily serve responses used in another case because each case involves different plaintiffs.

Fifth, Defendant argues that Plaintiffs' counsel should not have spent 3 hours to prepare documents ahead of a final status conference and requests a reduction of 2 hours. Defendant also argues that Plaintiffs' counsel should not have billed 7.3 hours to prepare

"templated" motions in limine. These arguments are not persuasive because the documents prepared include case specific documents such as jury instructions, exhibit and witness lists, verdict forms, and 11 motions in limine.

Sixth, Defendant argues that Plaintiffs' counsel should only be entitled to 3 hours of time spent to prepare this fee motion, the reply brief, and attend the hearing. This request is denied. It is unreasonable to expect Plaintiffs' counsel to review Defendant's opposition brief and prepare a reply brief in 1 hour when Defendant has challenged multiple categories of billing entries and failed to even identify the specific entries, which would require additional time for Plaintiffs' counsel (as it did for the Court) to discern the specific tasks at issue.

However, the Court reduces the amount of time preparing the fee motion from 6.5 hours to 3 (which, at a billing rate of $625, amounts to $2,187.50); 6.5 hours is an excessive amount of time to spend on reviewing billing entries in this case when: (1) there is no evidence that many duplicative or unnecessary entries had to be excluded and (2) the memorandum of points and authorities contains little legal analysis.

Last, the Court deducts the 1.7 hours

($315) billed for coordinating the logistics for Plaintiffs' vehicle surrender and the transfer of settlement funds as administrative. (Collins v. City of Los Angeles (2012) 205 Cal.App.4th 140, 159.) But the Court refuses to deduct the 14.1 hours that Defendant claims are “purely clerical” because Defendant fails to identify which specific entries are challenged. (Lunada Biomedical v. Nunez (2014) 230 Cal.App.4th 459, 488.)

In conclusion, the Court reduces the requested fee award of $21,737 by $3,052.50 and grants the motion for attorney’s fees in the amount of $18,684.50. The Court’s determination of costs and expenses is postponed due to Defendant’s pending motion to tax costs.
