15. Bourgeois, et al, v. AJTGC Trucking, et al, Case No. CIVSB2513207

Def. Sandslide Materials' Motion to Strike Portions of the Second Amended Complaint
6/16/26, 9:00 a.m., Dept. S-17

Tentative Ruling

The Court would GRANT the motion to strike the prayer for punitive damages against Defendant Sandslide, at page 35, subsection D. Plaintiff will have 20 days leave to amend.

Case Summary

This is a wrongful death case arising out of an auto accident. Plaintiffs allege that on the morning of October 31, 2024, Defendant Rodriguez was driving a dump truck and hauling a sand-loaded trailer. The truck and trailer were owned by Defendant Gatica Genara (Genara). Plaintiffs allege Rodriguez was driving in the course and scope of his employment with Defendants AJTGC Trucking (AJTGC), Tri-State, Arreola Trucking (Arreola), and/or Gothic Landscape (Gothic).

Moreover, Plaintiffs allege that Defendant Rodriguez was driving on Highway 74 and travelling downhill at an unsafe speed. They further alleges that his brakes were either improperly installed, maintained, or utilized, and that he had a brake failure. Thus, as he rounded a curve, his vehicle overturned and the trailer crossed the centerline and struck an oncoming pickup truck, fatally injuring Plaintiffs' decedent. In that light, Plaintiffs filed the original Complaint on May 9, 2025. Relevant here, the operative Second Amended Complaint (SAC) was filed on March 9, 2026, and it alleges (1) negligence [wrongful death]; (2) negligence [survival action]; and (3) vicarious liability.

Statement of the Law

Code of Civil Procedure section 436(a), authorizes the Court to strike matters that are "irrelevant, false or improper." "Irrelevant" means any immaterial allegation in the complaint, and "immaterial" means (i) an allegation that is not essential to the statement of a claim or defense; (ii) an allegation that is neither pertinent to nor supported by an otherwise sufficient claim or defense; or (iii) a demand for judgment requesting relief not supported by the allegations of the complaint or cross-complaint. (Code Civ. Proc., §431.10(b)-(c).) Further, any part of a pleading that is not drafted or filed in conformity with the law may be stricken. (Code Civ. Proc., § 436(b).)

Analysis

Relevant here, Defendant Sandslide Materials Corp. (Sandslide) seeks to strike the prayer for punitive or exemplary damages stated in Plaintiffs' Prayer for Relief.

Punitive damages are available in instances in which the defendant is guilty of oppression, fraud, or malice. (See Civ. Code, § 3294(a) & (c)(1)-(3).) “Malice” is defined by statute as conduct “intended by the defendant to cause injury to plaintiff, or despicable conduct that is carried on by the defendant with a willful and conscious disregard for the rights or safety of others.” (Civ. Code, § 3294(c)(1).) “Oppression” means despicable conduct that subjects a person to cruel and unjust hardship in conscious disregard of that person’s rights.” (Civ. Code, § 3294(c)(2).) “Despicable conduct” is therefore a part of both “oppression” and “malice.” Despicable conduct is defined as “conduct which is so vile, base, contemptible, miserable, wretched or loathsome that it would be looked down upon and despised by ordinary decent people.” (American Airlines, Inc. v. Sheppard, Mullin, Richter & Hampton (2002) 96 Cal.App.4th 1017, 1050.) Such conduct has been described as “[having] the character of outrage frequently associated with crime.” (Ibid.)

“[A] conclusory characterization of defendant’s conduct as intentional, willful and fraudulent is a patently insufficient statement of ‘oppression, fraud, or malice, express or implied,’ within the meaning of section 3294.” (Brousseau v. Jarrett (1977) 73 Cal.App.3d 864, 872.) However, conclusory allegations will not be stricken when other factual allegations in the complaint lend to the conclusion that the conduct satisfies the requirements for punitive damages. (Perkins v. Superior Court (1981) 117 Cal.App.3d 1, 6.)

Further, “accidentally harmful conduct cannot provide the basis for punitive damages under [California] law.” (Simon v. San Paolo U.S. Holding Co., Inc. (2005) 35 Cal.4th 1159, 1181.) California “cases have uniformly recognized that . . . even gross negligence, or recklessness is insufficient” to meet the extreme standard of conduct required to support punitive damages. (Dawes v. Superior Court (1980) 111 Cal.App.3d 82, 87.)

The SAC alleges that Defendant Sandslide, as a “licensed weighmaster” [SAC, ¶11] and “DOT regulated corporation” [SAC, ¶30], loaded Defendant Rodriguez’s truck “such that it weighed 79,400 lbs., dangerously in excess of the 73,001 GCVWR that the equipment was rated to safely haul.” (SAC, ¶49.) The SAC asserts that it was “readily apparent” to Sandslide that the truck was “dangerously overloaded” because the truck only had three axles and the manufacturer’s information that the truck was only rated at 73,001 lbs. was “present and visible to . . . Sandslide.” (SAC, ¶50.) Sandslide was “knowledgeable” that trucks loaded in excess of their safety rating “are more prone to overturn,” have problems with braking, and that it is illegal. (SAC, ¶75.) Despite knowing the dangers, Sandslide “knowingly overloaded the equipment” that created “an extremely dangerous hazardous situation for other road users wherein Sandslide knew it was likely that the weight of the equipment would cause a crash and seriously hurt or kill someone.” (SAC, ¶¶76-77.)

California “cases have uniformly recognized that . . . even gross negligence, or recklessness is insufficient” to meet the extreme standard of conduct required to support punitive damages. (Dawes v. Superior Court (1980) 111 Cal.App.3d 82, 87.) Although Plaintiffs allege that the truck’s weight rating was “visible and available” to Sandslide, there are no allegations that the Sandslide employees were aware of this information and loaded the truck in willful or conscious disregard of such requirements. Therefore, the factual allegations are insufficient to support the conclusory assertion that Sandslide knew that the weight of this truck would “likely” cause it to crash.

Case Summary

This is a motor vehicle accident case. Plaintiff alleges that on October 18, 2023, Defendants negligently operated their vehicles by driving at an unsafe speed and caused an automotive accident in Fontana. Plaintiff alleges he incurred injuries and damages. As such, he filed a suit on October 16, 2025, alleging causes of action for (1) motor vehicle and (2) general negligence.

Summary of the Law

The service of a summons is the process by which the court acquires jurisdiction over a defendant in a civil action. (MJS Enterprises Inc. v. Superior Court (1984) 153 Cal.App.3d 555, 557.) Without substantial compliance with the statutory requirements for service of summons personal jurisdiction is not conferred, even if the defendant has notice of the litigation. (Ruttenberg v. Ruttenberg (1997) 53 Cal.App.4th 801, 808.) A defendant on or before the last day to plead, or any further time that the court for good cause allows, may bring a motion to quash service of summons because the court lacks jurisdiction. (Code Civ. Proc., § 418.10(a)(1).) When challenging service by a motion to quash, a plaintiff bears the burden of proving by a preponderance of the evidence the validity of the service and the court’s jurisdiction over the defendant by proving the facts requisite to effective service. (Summers v. McClanahan (2006) 140 Cal.App.4th 403, 413.)

Analysis

Here, Defendant Kennedy specially appears and moves to quash service.
