Benefit Cosmetics Case No. 26STCV14708

v.

Hearing:

June 25, 2026

Location:

Stanley Mosk Courthouse

Department:

833 Vivianna Blanch Judge:

Joseph Lipner

Order Denying Preliminary Injunction

Plaintiff

Benefit Cosmetics LLC ("Benefit") moves for a preliminary injunction restraining and enjoining Defendant Viviana Blanch ("Blanch") from directly or indirectly obtaining, accessing, using, retaining, utilizing or disclosing Benefit's confidential, proprietary and trade secret information.

Benefit also requests that Blanch

(a) swear and account for all Benefit property, including all information removed, downloaded, transferred, printed, accessed, detailed, or e-mailed from Benefit's computers, servers, or network; (b) produce to a neutral third-party computer forensic expert, agreed upon by the parties, all electronic devices in Blanch's possession, custody, or control, at any time during her tenure at Benefit, for inspection to verify the use, access, disclosure, printing, copying, and deleting of Benefit property, including but in no way limited to all external hard drives, personal computers, laptops, phones, and tablets, and all related passwords and access codes; and (c) produce to a neutral third-party computer forensic expert, agreed upon by the parties, access to all repositories or storage areas used by at any time during her tenure at Benefit, for inspection to verify the use, access, disclosure, printing, deleting, and copying of Benefit property, including but in no way limited to all email accounts, cloud accounts, e-files, and other similar repositories, and all related passwords and access codes.

The

Court does not issue a tentative.

Instead, the Court asks the parties to address the following issues at the hearing:

1. What specific information does Benefit claim to be trade secrets? How does Benefit define and delineate what the trade secrets are?
2. Does Blanch retain information of Benefit? As the Court reads the papers, Blanch has not denied retaining Benefit's information. What gives Blanch the right to hold this material?
